

News Round Up ... everything that you simply didn't have time to look at online

GSR reach 25 years in Italian style

Italian manufacturer GSR Cocoa Machinery has staged its 'highly deserved' celebrations at Villa Calchi, Italy, marking a major milestone of 25 years within the chocolate industry. GSR invited guests to a special anniversary event in Italy, where CEO and founder of GSR, Luigi Turia, offered praise to both the company staff and its customers as a major factor in its success story saying:

"They represent the lifeblood and an indispensable component, which allowed the company to become what is today in the world: one of the major leaders in the sector."

During his speech, he took the opportunity to emphasise that "last year represented a particularly flourishing period for the company, started in the best way, continued with the long-awaited participation in the prestigious Interpack trade fair and ended with an event so much felt that tonight, aimed just to crown, not just a festive occasion but a whole year of successes."

Giuseppe Turia, General Manager of GSR, explained the company's progress had placed it in a strong position moving into the New Year adding:

"With the expansion of personnel and new targets to be conquered, we are ready to strengthen the sector with new ideas and to establish new market standards, so much so that we are already projecting into a 2018 of great successes and satisfaction. Kennedy's congratulate GSR on their wonderful achievements.